

One Last Beer – Mike Croll

Image John Barrett

Kingswood Warren when it was BBC R&D

Just 10 years after the BBC vacated Kingswood Warren, Mike Croll has written a book of his memories of 40 years life at Kingswood Warren. This gives us an insight into the World Leading projects the BBC conducted and International Work to establish new Broadcast Technologies and Standards.

Mike describes his work on an early standards converter, the digitisation of audio and the Ceefax system. He also presents the work of internationally recognised engineers, scientists and mathematicians who he led in developing studio stills stores, an electronic animation system and digital video recorders for standard definition and high-definition television.

The book also includes his memories of life growing up in Battle.

The e-book is available as a Kindle book from Amazon.

The book has 124 illustrations and 69 links